Energy powers everything we touch, providing light, warmth, and most of the products we use on a daily basis — yet the fossil fuel industry is vilified in the mainstream media. As access to reliable, affordable energy increases, nearly every measurement of human flourishing improves, from life expectancy and child mortality to education and economic freedom. Jason Isaac of the Life:Powered project will share persuasion tactics to effectively communicate how responsible production of energy will continue to make the world safer, our environment cleaner, and each and every citizen more prosperous.
